SPARKS' PERSPECTIVE

Ron Sparks Commissioner

Here at the department, we have been talking about the Premises ID Registration Program for quite a while now. Thousands of farmers in Alabama have signed up for this voluntary program. I am very proud that so many of them have chosen to be a part of something that helps everyone in the state and around the country. In an emergency situation, such as the recent case of a cow testing positive for BSE in Alabama, you can see just how important Premises ID can be when you need to trace an animal back to it's herd of origin quickly.

The question has come up repeatedly over the last few weeks "Why won't you give out the location of the farm?" There are two main reasons for not divulging such information publicly.

First, BSE is not a contagious disease. This means it will not be spread to other animals or humans. There is no need for a quarantine or evacuation of the area where the cow had been living. The only scientifically known way for a human to contract BSE is to eat the brains or spinal column of the diseased animal.

We take surveillance of BSE very seriously. We take every precaution to ensure that the testing program protects consumers in Alabama. There are also strict laws about not allowing dangerous matter into the food chain. Years ago, brains were actually sold in supermarkets, but not any more. Specified Risk Material such as brain and spinal cords of cattle over 30 months of age do not enter the food chain. Downed cows at feed lots are disposed of and do not enter the food chain. Since 1997, ruminant to ruminant feed was banned. The feed with infected material in it is how some cows over 30 months are believed to have contracted the disease. Because of the ban, age limit, and testing we have been fortunate to have had only three confirmed cases of BSE located in the United States.

Some people have questioned whether this system only protects cattle producers, but producers want their beef to be tested and safe because they want safe beef for consumers. If beef is not safe, then there is no market. Protecting the privacy of the farmer only ensures that other farmers will feel comfortable to come forward if they think they have a suspect animal.

Producer participation in the Premises ID Program and the BSE surveillance program is the second reason for not naming the farmer or location. Quite simply, these programs have been successful because farmers participate. Those of us at USDA and the state departments of agriculture understand the farmers' need for privacy when it comes to their business, and their business is farming, not necessarily public relations. It is easy to get carried away with trying to solve the mystery of

BSE DISCOVERED IN ALABAMA

Last month, Agriculture & Industries Commissioner Ron Sparks, State Veterinarian Tony Frazier, and the USDA confirmed that a cow located in Alabama tested positive for bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE). Federal and state agriculture workers excavated the remains of the animal, which had been buried on the farm and did not enter the animal or human food chain, in accordance with USDA protocols. The carcass was that of a red crossbred beef type cow. An examination of the cow's teeth confirmed that the animal was at least 10 years of age. Samples were taken of the animal and the remaining carcass was transported to one of the department's diagnostic labs for proper disposal. State and Federal staff are continuing the traceback to determine the herd of origin.

The cow was first examined by a local veterinarian in late February 2006. After the animal failed to respond to medical attention, it was humanely euthanized. The cattle producer buried the cow at the farm because Alabama Department of Agriculture & Industries regulations require burial of livestock within 24 hours. The producer did not suspect that the cow had BSE. The local veterinarian sent samples of the cow to the Alabama Department of Agriculture & Industries lab system, which was then forwarded to the USDA lab in Athens, GA as part of the routine voluntary surveillance program for BSE testing. After the rapid test for BSE gave an inconclusive result, the samples were sent to Ames, Iowa for a Western Blot test, which gave a positive result. A third test, the immunohisto-chemistry (IHC) test, was then performed and also returned positive results for BSE.

One calf was identified by the owner as belonging to the red cow. The calf is approximately 6 weeks old and appeared to be a healthy animal. The calf was transported to a USDA lab where DNA from the calf will be compared to that of the red cow to confirm relation. According to Dr. Ken Angel with the USDA, if confirmed, this would be the first offspring of a BSE diagnosed cow in the United States. Officials also learned that in early 2005 the BSE-positive cow gave birth to another black bull supplements in cattle feed since 1997. Commissioner Sparks stresses that beef consumption in this country is safe and there are measures in place to see that they continue. For example, downer animals are not allowed to enter commerce for human consumption and there is a ban on feeding ruminant derived protein to cattle.

The Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries and the USDA have been encouraging participation in Premises ID Registration as an important step in controlling animal disease. Since starting the program in 2005, over 2,000 premises have been registered in Alabama. For more information on Premises ID Registration call 334/240-7253.

Farmer-Managed Marketing of Livestock Products Workshop

The Alabama Cooperative Extension System will host a two-day workshop at the Lambert-Powell Meats Laboratory in Auburn highlighting farmer-managed marketing of livestock products. The workshop, to be held April 25-26, will provide insight on expanded marketing opportunities.

"Farmers are always looking for ways to boost revenues," said Dr. Walt Prevatt, an Extension economist. "This workshop will expose them to many issues they might not have considered."

Topics to be discussed at the workshop include entrepreneurship, food safety and labeling, permits, licenses and regulations for preharvest and processing livestock products and retail distribution and merchandising of livestock products, business management, and information on community supported agriculture.

Speakers will include various entrepreneurs, experts from Auburn University, North Carolina State University, the University of Tennessee and representatives from the Alabama Department of Agriculture and the Alabama Department of Public Health.

The registration fee is $40 and will include materials, a notebook, meals and breaks. Early registration is encouraged. Space is limited to 100 participants. To register contact Dr. Walt Prevatt, Ag Economics Department, 208 Comer Hall, Auburn University, AL 36849. For directions or more information, call 334/844-1566.

Increased Profits for Alabama Agricultural Industries

The Waste Reduction and Technology Transfer (WRATT) Foundation has received a funding grant to assist Alabama's agricultural industry in reducing their costs and streamlining operations to increase bottom-line profits. WRATT is a non profit foundation that enlists the services of about 25 retired engineers, scientists, CEOs, and other professionals throughout Alabama with extensive industrial experience in pollution prevention, energy conservation, and waste reduction. The WRATT Foundation typically performs a confidential on-site assessment of operations for a participating organization to identify potential waste reduction and energy conservation strategies and opportunities. Assessments are performed free of charge for participating organizations. Since 1989, WRATT has conducted over 1,900 on-site assessments in six states and three third-world countries, saving millions of dollars.

Using funds from other grants, WRATT has provided its technical services to 45 agricultural businesses and industries in Alabama including cotton gins, nurseries, co-ops, poultry and catfish farms, feed and seed mills, fertilizer manufacturers, and others. In every case, WRATT has identified cost-saving opportunities. Under this grant, WRATT will conduct 15 on-site assessments throughout Alabama. Equipment, facilities, and operations will be evaluated and recommendations made to improve operating efficiencies, labor and space utilization, and waste disposal practices. In addition, energy costs will be evaluated with the objective of finding inexpensive improvements and operational changes which will reduce costs. Each agricultural business or industry will receive a confidential report listing findings and recommendations for improvements and cost reductions.

For additional information, see WRATT's web site at www.wratt.org. WRATT can be contacted at 256/248-0191 or by e-mail: rmitchell@wratt.org. WRATT has offices in Birmingham and Mobile. On-site assessments can be set up within a few days after contacting WRATT.

Product Spotlight

Charles Pilleteri Senior opened the first Pilleteri Family grocery store, Supreme Supermarket in Birmingham, Alabama in 1934. This began the Pilleteri family tradition of food production in Alabama which continues today. Inspired by working in his grandfather's supermarket, Charles J. Pilleteri opened Mr. P's Butcher shop and Deli in Bluff Park with his brother Jake in 1975. Mr. P's built a reputation for having great steaks and homemade Italian Sausage; as well as deli sandwiches which became a favorite among the neighborhoods and local businesses in that area. There at Mr. P's shop, Charles J. Pilleteri created the Pilleteri's Seasonings and Marinade which are sold in most Alabama stores today.

All Pilleteri products are made with low sodium and no MSG. Mr. P's Seasoning comes in a wide variety of flavors including Original, Cajun & Creole, Italian, Greek, Lemon Pepper, Bold & Spicy and Mexican. Pilleteri's Liquid Marinade is made from the same great Original Seasoning but has lemon juice, soy sauce and water added to it.

Mr. P's Butcher Shop and Deli is located in Bluff Park on top of Shades Mountain at the intersection of Shades Crest Road and West Oxmore in Birmingham, and the hours are 8:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m., Monday through Saturday. The phone number is 205/823-6136.

"who and where." What must be remembered is that the persons who owned this diseased cow are not celebrities or dangers to society. They are farmers.

I hope that you will continue to encourage your local representatives to support House Bill 254 in the legislature. I want to thank Representative Galliher for sponsoring this bill and Senator Zeb Little for handling it in the Senate. I appreciate their continuous support of the agriculture industry.

House Bill 254 -- Sponsored by Representative Blaine Galliher, this bill seeks to provide for the confidentiality of information initially gathered by the State Department of Agriculture and Industries as the department implements and maintains a database for Animal Identification in accord and consistent with the USDA's National Animal Identification System. Premises ID Registration has been implemented in the last year and Animal ID Registration is not far behind. The information on premises and animals, gathered at the request of the Commissioner, is to protect the interest of public health, safety, and welfare. The bill passed in the House without any nays. It received a favorable vote in the Senate Ag Committee. Presently, the bill is on the Senate calendar, but must be placed on special order calendar to come up for a vote.

The Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries and the USDA have been encouraging participation in Premises ID Registration as an important step in controlling animal disease. Since starting the program in 2005, over 2,000 premises have been registered in Alabama. For more information on Premises ID Registration call 334/240-7253.
